

Acknowledgments

Comments on the draft edition of Nuclear Disorder or Cooperative Security or portions thereof were provided by Dr. Randy Rydell, UN Office for Disarmament Affairs and former Report Director, Weapons of Mass Destruction Commission; Bruce Stedman; Dr. James Paul, Global Policy Forum (“The Role of the UN Security Council”); Alice Slater, Nuclear Age Peace Foundation, New York (“Climate Change and Nuclear Power”); and Dr. Craig Eisendrath (“Delivery Systems”). The comments improved the book, and we appreciate them. Of course, the book remains the responsibility of the authors, editors, and sponsoring organizations, Lawyers’ Committee on Nuclear Policy (LCNP), Western States Legal Foundation (WSLF), and Reaching Critical Will (RCW) of the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF). The persons named above do not necessarily endorse its analysis or recommendations.

Ray Acheson, RCW, made major contributions toward completion of the book, assisting with copy editing and compiling the bibliography and list of abbreviations. Waverly de Bruijn, Global Action to Prevent War, assisted with copy editing. Felicity Hill, WILPF and International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, made extensive comments on the draft edition in addition to co-authoring the section entitled “A Gender Perspective.” Susi Snyder, WILPF, edited two sections, “Disarmament Machinery” and “A Gender Perspective.” Elizabeth Shafer, LCNP, commented on the draft edition, as did Shirley Fingerhood, LCNP. Summer associate Judith McDaniel, LCNP, and interns Julie Friedlander, RCW, and Steve Stoerman and Dannette Lambert, WSLF, assisted with research and analysis.

We thank Daryl Kimball, Arms Control Association, for his assistance in launching our project, Civil Society Review of the Final Report of the WMD Commission, and for his contributions during the initial stage of responding to the June 2006 release of the Commission’s report.

We gratefully acknowledge funding provided by the Ploughshares Fund and the Ford Foundation for the project and the book, and funding provided by The Simons Foundation for future outreach based on the book.
